Dear Mr Nicolson,

I hope you will not think me very grasping if I complain that 'knole,' which you said was being sent me, has never arrived?

No doubt they got the addres wrong. It should be.

I have been reading some of your books in the new Georgian book with great pleasure; & so can't help scanning you in this way in order that I may get more from your last book.

Yours sincerely
Virginia Woolf.

Dear Mr. Nicolson,

I should never have dared to dun you if I had known the magnificence of the book. Really, I am ashamed, & would like to say that copies of all my books are at your service if you raise a finger — but they look stint & slattern & shabby. There is nothing I enjoy more than family histories, & I am falling upon Knole the first moment I get.

I am shameless enough to hope that the proofs went to the wrong address. I was prepared to sniff at Eddie Georgians, & so I did; but not at yours.

I wonder if you would come & dine with us? Say Monday 8th, 7.45.

We omit dine so much as picnic, as the press has got into the larder & into the dining room, & we never dress.

I would look up a train, & give you directions if you can come, as I hope.

Yours very sincerely

Virginia Woolf.

Sunday,

Dear Mr. Nicolson,

How extraordinarily good of you to send me Hassan, & I am ashamed that you should take this trouble, owing to my laziness, for I have meant to get it for ever so long.

I shall start reading it & letting my theories of modern poetry directly I am in a fit state, but having sat up till three this morning watching other people dance, I am sunk in the depths of stupidity.

I hope you'll come & look at my great aunt's photographs of Tennyson & other people some time. My sister has many of them at her house.

Yours very sincerely
Virginia Woolf.

Tuesday

Dear Mrs. Nicolson,

Do you think that you & your husband would dine with us, at my sister's house, 46 Gordon Sq^re^, on Thursday ~~15th~~, 15th at 7.45.
She would [illegible] the photographer, & would very much like to see you.
There would be no party, & [illegible] dont dress.

Yours very sincerely
Virginia Woolf.

Dear Mr. Nicolson.

Yes, do come tomorrow, Thursday — it will really suit us better than Monday, if you don't mind finding us alone, as our maid's out.

Will you catch the 7.10 at Sloane Square, which comes straight to Richmond. I will meet you & show you the way, which is short, & difficult to explain.

If I don't hear, I shall expect you then.

Yours sincerely
Virginia Woolf.
